Game at 3:30 o'clock.

By LOUIS A. DOUGHER.

Saturday will come the first double-header of the 1916 campaign in the Capital. Connie Mack's rejuvenated Athletics being the attraction at the Georgia avenue ball yard. The first game will start promptly at 2 o'clock. Letters from fans asking for a Saturday bargain influenced the Old Fox.

Tomorrow the Mackmen will make their second appearance of the season here, opening a three-day stop containing four games. On their first visit they impressed fans as being far stronger than had been expected, and they have been improving ever since. The Mackmen will give the Griffs more of an argument than they have received since they were battling the Indians.

Waivers have been asked on Otis Crandall, the veteran pitcher, by Fielder Jones, and they will doubtless be obtained without much trouble. Crandall has never been a wonder, and he is now too slow for fast company.

In this brutal campaign, the leader is continually being torn from his place and trampled under foot. That's what Urban Faber and the Associated White Sox did to the Griffins yesterday, simply tore them loose from that much-to-be-desired first place by kicking them, 4 to 1.

Remember, boys, don't take anything away from Urban Faber. He was an stumbling block at every moment. Once the home boys got two hits in a bunch, but that was the one time that happened. Faber had the opposing batsmen eating out of his hand as a rule.

Bert Gallia started off in his customary classy fashion and battled Faber evenly for four frames. Then Bert happened to remember that somebody had hit him seven years ago and he got so wild about it that he walked a couple of lads and let them walk sharply to center, scoring both of them. That's how the Griffs happened to drop that one yesterday.

Doc Ayers was on the pitching peak in the sixth and we all suffered, including Doc. John Henry's peg to McBride was high, letting one run over, and Ayers played kindergarten baseball with a heavy to the plate, letting another over. However, two more runs were unnecessary and there's no sense piling all over the Hillville sawbones. The nub of the whole thing is that, even without those extra runs, the Sox would have won. Faber was unhittable in the tight places and those first two tallies behind him were quite sufficient, boys, quite sufficient.

Joe Judge's single opened the second, a sacrifice advancing him. Henry's blow scored him. That's all we ever got.

In the fifth McBride singled and got around to third, but Milan forced Foster for the third death. Nothing doing! Jamieson reached second and Morgan was on first with two down in the seventh, waking up the small crowd, but Foster merely rolled to Eddie Collins.

The Sox shoved over their first pair in this fashion. Jackson walked. Folsch sacrificed and Schalk walked. McMullin scratched a hit in front of the plate, filling the sack. Faber's base hit to Milanville scored Jackson and Schalk.

Buck Weaver was hit by a pitched ball to open the sixth. Eddie Collins sacrificed and let Faber scratch a single to Ayers. Jackson rolled to Ayers and Weaver was caught between third and home. As Henry started up the line to get Weaver, Ayers very carefully and deliberately tossed to the plate. Henry just barely touched the ball with his bare hand. Weaver scoring. Fournier and Schalk worked a double steal. Henry's high peg to McBride preventing a death at the plate.

GIANTS SET UP RECORD For National League

Griffmen, in Cleaning Up West Four Years Ago, Now Share Honors With McGraw's Team—Providence, in 1884, Won 20 Games in a Row.

Regarded merely from a mathematical standpoint, the thirteen successive victories, thus far credited to the Giants, hardly merit a chapter all to themselves in the history of baseball annals. The winning streak is topped by eight others in major league annals, and is equaled by one of the New York club's own victorious stretches during 1913.

Yet there are considerations that make the present streak a record-breaker in every sense of the word. After losing thirteen out of fifteen in the East, the Giants began a series of successes just as soon as they opened in the West, in Pittsburgh, on May 5. They left Cincinnati for the East last night, and brought with them the credit for a feat that had never before been recorded in the National League—that of winning every game on a Western trip.

In the American League the trick of winning every game on a Western trip was performed by the Washington club in 1912, when it landed seven consecutive wins in a row. It won the game at Boston on May 20, and on June 1, at St. Louis, began a string of sixteen Western victories. The streak was ended at Philadelphia in the first game of a double-header on June 19. With two out and two strikes on him, Baker hit a home run in the ninth that tied the score. The Mackmen won in the tenth.

Winning streaks have nearly always been home products. Providence, champion of the National League, in 1884 set the modern record of twenty consecutive games in a row. The second feat of that kind in the senior circuit was that of the Giants in 1904, when they ran eighteen straight and won the pennant for the first time.

It was in 1908 that the White Sox had their winning streak of nineteen games, which stands as the American League record. After taking eleven in a row, six of them by the shut-out route, the Hitless Wonders played a scoreless tie with the Yankees. Then they resumed operations until they had gathered in nineteen victories, seven of them at the expense of the New York club. That streak, like the Providence club's, came in August, which seems a favored month for feats of that nature.

The Giants have always been a great club for scoring consecutive victories. We have a record of only twelve streaks of ten games or more since 1876, and four of them go to the Giants' credit. In 1913, after winning fourteen, the Giants gathered in thirteen in succession. The longest winning streak on record for the Brooklyn club is that of 1914, when the Ebbeis clan won eleven games. Here is a list of winning streaks of ten or more:

MEREDITH HOUSE IS OUT OF BIG EVENT

BOSTON, Mass., May 25.—Meredith House, Leland Stanford's sensational hurdler, is ineligible for the coming intercollegiate, and no effort will be made to reinstate him, according to Capt. F. S. Murray, of the Stanford team today.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the intercollegiate A. A. A. A. tonight, an important matter will be discussed relative to the conduct of the track and field championships tomorrow and Saturday.

The University of Maine, whose entries arrived a week late, was given a severe grilling, and it is possible that their athletes may be barred from competition. This will mean that Charley Rice will be out of the sprints, where he was figured to give the best of them a hard race.

Coch Moakley brought his Cornell squad, thirty-six strong, in town today, declaring it to be the best team he ever took out of Ithaca. Alva Richards, although suffering from groin trouble, will be entered in both jumps and the shot.

The Pacific coast stars will take their last workout today, and it is possible that some of the Cornell men may limber up on the track.

TURNER WILL NEXT BE MATCHED WITH SMITH

No little interest was manifested in wrestling circles here today in the announcement that "Zeke" Smith, the North Carolina middleweight, is to come here tomorrow night to take on Joe Turner. They will wrestle at the Lyceum.

Smith is the credited middleweight king of the South, and his achievements are well known in the section from which he hails. He is said to be exceedingly clever on the mat, and has sent word ahead of him that he is going to stop Joe Turner. It has been Smith's ambition to engage in a match with Turner in his home town for some time, but never until now has this been possible.

Manager Harry Tuberville has stipulated that tomorrow's match is to be a finish affair, and the winner will have to show his best goods if he expects to take the purse which has been hung up.

Yanks Rout Brownies, Who Fall Into Cellar

NEW YORK, May 25.—The Yankees routed the Brownies, 10 to 1, yesterday, and showed their back to the cellar.

Wellman was driven from the box in five innings, and Parks and McCabe were mauled around unmercifully. Bob Shawkey was in fine fettle, holding the St. Louis team to five hits. Score by innings:

Brownies..... 000 000—1 5 1

Yankees..... 200 033 02—10 0 0

Batteries—Brownies, Wellman, Parks, Fincher, McCabe and Severeid; Yankees, Shawkey and Walters.

And Nap Rucker manages to keep his bad ear towards the critics who want to let him in on the secret that he is through.

Ninety-pound Jimmy Wilde, of England, is out with a challenge to any of the welters and middles who can make his weight.

Jeas Willard is too game to strike an opponent low. Jeas wouldn't strike 'em any lower than $35.00.

Baller Grande's claim that he can beat anything on two legs excludes Boer Roddi, who is never out 'em.

Jimmy Wilde is about as big as a microbe and just as dangerous.

After watching the Giants play, Western critics admit that it is a hazardous proceeding trying to pick out the weak spots in a buzz saw while it is going.
